"I want to spread this on white bread," said one taster.

A key motivator, as shown by Sauder School of Business professor Izak Benbasat and his collaborators, is envy. Mice given curcumin showed much less depressed behavior than those without curcumin.