I've engaged in personal conversations about lifestyles, been to their houses, etc, etc. Disability rights, environmental justice, queerness, class, and the intersections thereof, with a special focus on health and social justice. Additionally, I've been involved in activities related to disability lobbying, environmental activism, and queer liberation. My work involves advocating for the rights of disabled individuals, promoting environmental sustainability, fostering a more inclusive society, and addressing issues of class and social stratification. These initiatives often intersect, requiring a multidisciplinary approach. Through these efforts, I aim to create a more equitable and just world for all.
